Student Input Needed on South African Reinvestment

by Lauren Weis, news editor

On Saturday Sept. 17 Donald Langenberg, Chancellor of the University of Maryland System (UMS), made an appeal on behalf of the Board of Regents to the UMS Student Council (UMSSC) to discuss the issue of South African reinvestment.

Last spring, the Finance Committee of the University of Maryland System (UMS) Board of Regents considered a proposal to rescind the UMS Policy on Investment of Endowed Funds in Companies Doing Business with South Africa.

At their March 25 meeting, the Regents determined that in order to receive more student input on the matter, no decision would be made about the policy until their May meeting.

In May, objections were raised by the University of Maryland College Park Black Student Union. The Regents decided to put off a decision on the policy.

The investment policy, adopted in June 1990, states:

"1. Investment of endowment funds of the University of Maryland System in the stock of companies that have business activities in South Africa is prohibited, and

2. Stock obtained by the University system through gift, if deemed to represent a company with business activities in South Africa, will be divested within sixty days following title acquisition."

As of July, the UMS has an endowment of over $81 million, a great deal of which comes from grants and trusts, which often are in the form of stocks.

According to the UMS, "this policy was enacted, at least in part, due to the strong support for it from the student community."

The UMSSC requested last year that the Board of Regents reconsider the appropriateness of their investment policy.

Langenberg told the UMSSC at their Sept. 17 meeting, "The Regents want to get this issue off the table."

Each school in the UMS is entitled to have two representatives on the UMSSC, usually chosen from among the SGA. The representatives cast only one vote per institution.

Members present at the meeting on Sept. 17 discussed the issue, but could not vote because they did not have a quorum.

No votes were cast, but during discussion only Joe Smith, SSU Junior, was against having a vote at that time. Smith explained, "The South African reinvestment issue demands that the UMSSC address three main concerns. We must determine how the student bodies of all the UMS campuses feel on this issue; how reinvesting or not reinvesting would affect the social changes currently occurring in South Africa; and whether a de facto apartheid state still exists. My objections were raised because I did not think the UMSSC had the answer to any of these questions at that time."

The UMSSC agreed, especially in view of the objections presented by SSU, that it would be necessary to survey student opinion before a decision could be made.

The UMS student council representatives were asked to poll their various campuses. The results will be discussed and possibly voted on at the Oct. 16 meeting, to be held at the University of Maryland at Baltimore.

Craig Heilman, SSU senior, who serves as Vice-Chair of the UMSSC said, "As South Africa is in the midst of political reform, having removed the policy of apartheid, it would be prudent to lift the sanctions."

On September 24,

1993, Nelson Mandela, president of the African National Congress and a candidate for the presidency of South Africa, told the United Nations that "the time has come when the international community should lift all economic sanctions against South Africa," and that the "demise of the white majority regime has been determined, agreed and set."

According to Cyril Daddieh, SSU professor of political science, the investment issue is "a moot point." He explained the history of the apartheid system.

In 1948, the Nationalist Party took power and instituted apartheid as a national policy, calling it "separate development."

Although the black majority comprised 74 percent of the population, they were restricted to 13 percent of the country's most desolate, depressed land.

In response to the policy of apartheid, the UN and other groups pressured the international community to institute economic sanctions against South Africa.

The United States was reluctant to impose such sanctions, fearing the loss of South Africa's, an anti-communist state, support during the cold war.

South Africa's natural resources and geographical location made it of strategic importance, both to U.S. military, economic and aerospace interests.

The U. S. feared loss of economic advantage and influence in the region if sanctions were imposed. If unilateral sanctions were imposed, other countries could gain economic advantage, particularly Japan.

However, Daddieh, an expert in African politics, said that during the 1960's when the South African economy was booming, there was no relaxation in the policies of apartheid. In fact, policies were specifically enacted to prevent blacks from benefiting economically.

Eventually, due to rising international pressure,

SSU Acquires New Properties Adjacent to Campus

by Jim Hudson, staff writer

Salisbury State has acquired several properties adjacent to the campus in recent years. It currently owns four houses along College Ave. and four houses along Camden Ave.

Joe Gilbert, executive vice president of SSU, says that the reason for this is two-fold, "We need the facilities moved into these houses, plus the lots are very deep, about 450 feet. They provide a nice buffer of... low activity and low noise between the campus [and area residents]."

One of these properties is the new Honors House on the corner of Camden Ave. and Loblolly Lane. The house plans are being developed. The house is being built through funds raised by the alumni association.

The adjoining property is the new president's house. It is nearly complete, needing only paint, carpet, and handicapped accessible ramps.

Bellavance will move to the new property sometime during the first half of October. The move will free up the old president's house which is expected to be demolished in November, making room for the new Commons building.

The corner lot on Camden and College Avenues is now the Center for Conflict Resolution. Expected to open this week, the center is co-funded by the opened at the beginning of the semester.

The building is undergoing a complete renovation, which will not be completed until the end of October. Plans call for an enclosed porch, adding a back sidewalk, building a gazebo and landscaping the grounds.

Next to the Honors House is a vacant lot which will hold a new alumni house, for which

The center will instruct students and area public school teachers in ways to settle confrontations in non-violent ways.

The house diagonally across from the center will become a residence for international students. Gilbert

Diversity of Clubs Has Something for Everyone

by Kate Spinner, staff writer

Last Tuesday, September 20, two rows of tables lined the sidewalk outside of the Powell Dining hall, decorated by various student organizations participating in Club Day.

SSU clubs and organizations had a chance to make their presence known and recruit new members.

According to Joe Oravec, head of the Office of Student Activities and Organizations, student organizations at SSU promote leadership skills, as well as skills in time management and organization that are necessary for employment.

Involvement in any group or club at SSU "balances the college experience by putting classroom learning into action," says Oravec, "many students are eager to be involved in clubs at SSU. This is why we have over 80 student clubs and organizations. There is a group for almost everyone."

All clubs, whether they are religious, ethnic, academic or sports oriented are open to all students at SSU.

Academic clubs are geared towards meeting graduates in their respective majors, searching out job opportunities and graduate schools, and offering services to the community. The psychology club participates in an annual Adopt-a-Family program where they donate food and gifts to a needy family during the holiday season.

Sports clubs get students active physically. John Hostetter, an enthusiastic member of the cycling club, said, "We're out there for people who just like riding. There is no required ability level," he said.

Greek organizations have national affiliation and members from SSU can meet members or alumni from other schools.

During this time of the year, all schools with a Greek community are participating in RUSH. During RUSH, fraternities and sororities try to get to know pledges (initiates) and recruit new members. "Sororities and Fraternities are well rounded organizations that encompass community, academics, and social affairs," said Oravec.

Special interest groups help students focus their efforts towards a specific interest. Doane Miller a member of New Agenda, hopes the group will "unify the campus by bringing all races and cultures together." This is the first semester New Agenda will be active on the SSU campus.

In order for a new club to exist at SSU or receive funding from the appropriations board, it must be approved by the Student Government Association. The SGA is the governing organization of all student clubs. For a club to be approved it must have a written constitution, elected officials, a faculty or staff advisor and a clause that opens the club to all SSU students.

Oravec plays a major role in advising groups and their leaders on starting new organizations or improving ones that already exist. He meets with student leaders, helps create fundraisers, gives advice on organizing retreats or special activities and arranges workshops.

Several workshops in student leadership, team-building, recruitment, communication, and publicity, offer valuable advice to members of all student organizations. His efforts to help strengthen SSU clubs, coincide with his belief that involvement in activities or clubs is an integral part of the college learning experience.

Benjamin Barber to Speak About "McWorld"

by Garrett McGlothlin, staff writer

Look out! McWorld is real. Its on television. Its everywhere. McWorld is real and it is the subject of the lecture to be presented by author Benjamin Barber on Wednesday, September 28th in SSU's Wicomico room. Barber will present his lecture "Strong Democracy in the Undemocratic World of McWorld".

In McDonald's new ad campaigns, the letters "McWorld" are emblazoned across the earth. The ads show McDonald's fast food restaurants in exotic locations around the world and suggests that McDonald's is bringing the world together into a united peaceful whole. One might believe the letters are real and that they are floating like giants somewhere in the stratosphere.

Barber created the term "McWorld" to describe the Worldwide trend of international economic integration. According to his article 'Jihad Vs. Mc World' in the March 1992 issue of The Atlantic Monthly, the phenomenon of McWorld is the economically driven coming together of nations. Under such drive to expand economic markets the global rise of international banks, multinational corporations, trade associations and transnational lobbies like Opec and greenpeace, as well as world news services like CNN, are eroding national sovereignty and creating common economic markets. But Barber warns that although this sounds appealing and harmless that it is in fact dangerous to democracy all around the world. Barber came up with the term McWorld at least two years before McDonald's began to use it as a slogan for their ads. Barber points out that "common markets demand a common language as well as a common currency as they produce common behavior bred by cosmopolitan city life everywhere. He writes that the information age has made culture into a weapon, where by economic supremacy in world trade has made "Culture has become more powerful than armaments." McDonald's in Moscow and Coke in China will do more to create a global culture than military colonization ever could."

Barber warns against the assumption that capitalism is identical with democracy. They are not antithesis, "It's just that capitalism and democracy are not identical." Therefore in promoting the former we cannot assume that we guarantee the latter. Barber may also speak on another possible threat to democracy the opposite of the economically driven globalization, which is the trend toward religious, ethnic factionalism which he calls "Jihad." Both are rising international trends; sometimes occurring within the same country simultaneously. Barber said "Just beyond the horizon of current events lie two possible futures—both bleak, neither democratic."

Barber's lecture on Wednesday, September 28th in SSU's Wicomico room at 7:30 pm is sponsored by the Faculty Cultural Events Committee, and is free and open to the public.

"the U.S. government under Reagan was brought to impose sanctions kicking and screaming," he said.

While the scope of the sanctions did not include regulation of private investment, many investors, particularly educational institutions, followed suit, withdrawing their holdings in South Africa.

While some argued that the sanctions would hurt black South Africans most, the Organization for African Unity and other anti-apartheid groups supported sanctions, believing that short term sacrifices would be ultimately reconciled.

It was ultimately the effects of such economic sanctions which hastened the demise of apartheid. In 1990, former South African president F.W. DeClerk authorized the release of exiled African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, who had been jailed 29 years for political crimes.

The various political parties began negotiations which culminated in democratic elections last May, in which the ANC was victorious.

Tremendous hardships have been brought about in South Africa as a direct result of the sanctions. Worldwide, virtually all institutions are in the process of repealing sanctions.

Daddieh said that "It would be in our own self interest to invest, as money is flowing in from Europe and Japan [creating increased economic competition]. There is no justification or excuse for not wanting to do business with South Africa."

The SSU UMSSC representatives will sponsor a forum in the upcoming weeks in order to allow students to explained that the rationale behind this is that many of the international students are unable to go home during breaks.

The new house gives them the opportunity to stay here rather than being moved out of a residence hall.

The current International House will continue to be used a meeting point and cultural center for the international students.

The Philosophy House, formerly the Honors House, holds the offices of the professors in the philosophy department, as well as the Philosophical Society. In addition, the bottom floor, including a kitchen, dining room, meeting lounge and philosophy library is open for student use.

The yellow house on the corner of Smith St. and College Ave. is owned by the university, but is currently divided into apartments and rented out to residents.

Gilbert said that plans call for its eventual demolition. The university will probably convert the lot into an area of "green space," but has not ruled out the possibility of turning it into a small parking lot.

The only other property currently owned by the school is on Camden across from Severn Hall. The university plans to utilize the house as a faculty residence.

Gilbert said that these type of properties are acquired through the SSU Foundation. "When an estate becomes available the sellers want to move very quickly."

If the university itself were to buy the property outright it would take six months or more for all the paper work. The Foundation can move much more quickly, and holds the house until the university receives the okay to purchase it.

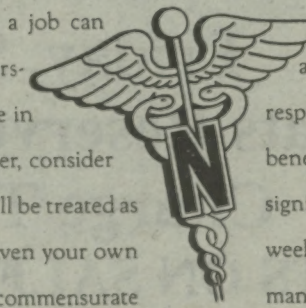

Gilbert said that the university has no definite plans to purchase any additional properties. He did admit, however, that if another of the properties along the Camden or College corridors was put on the market the university might be interested.

"We don't have a high demand [for those properties], but if they became available, we would explore the possibility [of buying them]."

Student Questions Faculty Practices

I have a few questions to ask of the faculty, administration and more importantly, the student body and campus community. These questions concern policies that affect the integrity of this institution.

Last year I took an applied piano course with our music department. A meeting time between the instructor and myself was arranged, and my first class in this area of the department began smoothly enough. Then on or about the third or fourth meeting, I was a little early for my lesson and walked into the room to warm up while waiting for the instructor. On the covered grand piano that was not being used I noticed a document that was several pages long. It was addressed to my instructor from the music department.

Upon looking closer at the document, I saw that it was a list of each of my instructor's students, followed by a brief history of that particular student's past with the music department. I skimmed until I found my name, and since the only course I had taken with the music department was Music appreciation, my 'synopsis' stated only that fact, and that I was currently taking the same applied course in organ playing.

I skimmed again and found a name I recognized as a friend who had my instructor at a different time. I was shocked to find the first statement of their 'synopsis' to read, and I quote, "...is neither a hard worker or a good student." Seconds later as I realized what I had read, my instructor walked in and we commenced our lesson. I told my friends and parents what I had read, but had no desire to challenge the music department on the purpose or origin of the said document.

Now, as far as I know, the teacher/course evaluations that we all complete at the end of the semester are reviewed by the administration. However, as far as I know, the results are not available to students. Is this true? If so, why? If I don't know what everyone has to say concerning a particular instructor, how am I to know what to expect from them? How am I to know the purpose of changes in the department concerning instructors?

Where lies the justification in an instructor being told secretly by their department that a particular student is a bad apple? What type of outlook on that student is inflicted on the instructor by such statements? What kind of grade will that student end up getting? Is it stated in the university catalog that certain departments distribute such gossip about tuition paying students?

Obviously, I am not trying to undermine the integrity or quality of instruction of our music department. I have learned a great deal in every music course I have taken, and found each and every instructor I have had to be very enlightening and encouraging. When asked, I give high regards to the methods and attitudes of these instructors, as well as the facilities made available to students.

Nevertheless, I cannot see the professionalism of the document I saw and what it had to say. I challenge someone, anyone, to answer these questions, not just for myself, but for Salisbury State University as a whole.

Highway Robbery

On Thursday, September 22, I glanced over the dinner menu posted in my dorm room and found nothing that quite appealed to my taste buds. So I decided to dodge the raindrops and venture over to the Gulls Nest. Mistake #1. After contemplating my choices and knowing I was only allotted $3.20 for dinner, I decided on a turkey sub. Which brings me to question one: why is it that the cost of dinner in the dining hall is $6 and change, and in the Gulls Nest it is half of that? What happens to the other $3 on our meal plan? Is it put in a savings account for us somewhere on campus? Or does it just disappear into thin air? Anyway back to our story.

I place my order, but the girl behind the counter treated me like I was some Hokie from Okie. All I wanted was a turkey club - lettuce, tomato, turkey and bacon (here's the curveball I throw her) but on a sub roll. She just couldn't figure it out. So, to make it easy for everyone involved, I had to order a turkey sub with bacon on the side. Feeling kind of racy, I buy a Mystic drink to add a little spice to my meal. Mistake #2. And to top off my dinner, a bag of barbecue chips (the snack bag).

I approach the cashier, hand her my meal card, and just about had an out of body experience when I heard the total. $6.34!! $6.34 for a sandwich, drink and chips? The cashier politely broke it down for me: $3.50 something for the sub, 95¢ for the bacon (that incidentally was cold), $1 for the drink and 50¢ for chips.

Absolute Highway robbery. 95¢ for bacon?! It's a good thing I was hungry because I didn't have the strength to call the cops for assault and battery.

I'm sure someone from meal headquarters will read this and reply they have overhead costs to cover blah, blah, blah. But do they have to hit us where it hurts, in our empty bellies and our wallets?

I guess I'll just have to buy an umbrella and eat Apple Jacks for the rest of my time served here at SSU.

New Way to Earn Credit Over Winter Break

by Ali Moyer, feature editor

Are you interested in exploring parts of Europe or Ecuador this Winter Break? If so, SSU is offering two totally different trips for you to enjoy.

Dr. Tony Whall is organizing a trip from January 5 to January 22 to study the cultural riches of Paris, Rome, Florence and Assisi.

"During this trip students will gain appreciation for the great centers of the European culture and intriguing works of art they have to offer," said Whall.

The purpose of the class is to acquaint students with the settings for works of fiction including Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Marble Faun" and various short stories of Mavis Gallant.

Although for most students this will be the first experience with Western culture, it will not be for Whall.

In 1985, in a joint excursion with Loyola College of Maryland, Whall and his wife accompanied 35 SSU students. "I could not do it without my wife," he said.

With every great experience there is a cost. Expect a price tag of $1,975 for travel and course expenses. Whall also estimates $20/day for food and other expenses.

"January is a less expensive and less encumbered time to visit Europe," Whall adds.

If you missed the interest meeting on September 21 feel free to contact Whall at 548-7037.

Another trip will allow students to experience Ecuador. This trip will have a slightly different focus.

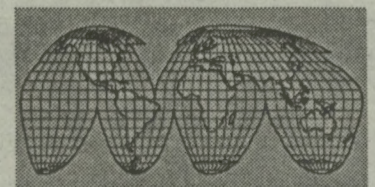

SSU and Frostburg State University, under the instruction of SSU's Dr. St. Martin, will depart December 28 for Cuenca, Ecuador.

The program is for Spanish students, and offers second and third semester Spanish classes, a class in Spanish conversation and an advanced Spanish literature course.

While in Ecuador students will live with families who speak mostly Spanish.

"This is not a travel course, it is mostly a learning experience, with a major component of it being language study," said St. Martin.

The trip has an all inclusive price of $1650.

A young American woman, who teaches English to international visitors, had the following unusual experience... A student from her course asked her to dinner in order to celebrate the end of the course, and also to practice his English. She agreed to go. On the appointed evening, her host arrived in a stretch limousine, and whisked her off to the finest restaurant in the city, and proceeded to order the meal in

Maggs is Free

by Chris Boyle, staff writer

"The University has the nicest gym on the shore, besides Ocean City," said Samantha Strickland, a volunteer for the SSU girls basketball team.

"Students should take full advantage of what's here," Strickland commented while lifting weights in the Maggs Strengh Room.

With an SSU ID card, students and faculty may borrow equipment including basketballs, frisbees, footballs, soccer balls, swimming goggles, and other sports equipment. This equipment must be checked out through the Campus Recreation Office in the Maggs Physical Activities Center, during their open hours.

The Maggs Center has extended their evening hours from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. this semester to avoid overcrowding.

Tim Smith, SSU equipment coordinator, warns "Use it while you can, 11 p.m. is new. If [Maggs] is not used during this time we'll have to go back to 10 p.m. next semester."

"I like the longer hours, they are very convenient," comments Kelly Zerlaut, SSU junior majoring in psychology.

perfect French. He then ordered a bottle of fine wine, and gallantly poured two glasses. He proceeded to lift his glass up to the candlelight, look her in the eye and with much dignity proffer a toast "Well... up yours." Of course what he meant was "Bottoms up." This amusing anecdote points to the ease of miscommunication in an

Jane Elliott Will 'Open Your Eyes'

by MaryBeth Vanston, staff writer

Jane Elliott is coming to SSU this Wednesday, September 28, to give us all a cultural reality check. Elliott is best known for her "Blue eye/Brown eye" experiment, which she conducted with her third-grade class in 1968. Elliott conducted the experiment in order to teach her class about racism. She told her students that if they had blue eyes they were inferior, not clean or intelligent, and instructed them to sit in the back of the classroom. The brown-eyed students on the other hand were told that they were superior and new or unfamiliar culture. This is particularly true when using the English language, which is filled with idioms, slang and frequent inconsistencies. This can happen just as easily to Americans traveling abroad, or even in other regions of our own country.

By having experiences like the one described above, both parties can learn and expand their horizons, and begin to appreciate the richness inherent in cultural differences. At Salisbury State University, everyone has the opportunity to accomplish just that. Our international population is rapidly growing; we now have students from each of the seven world continents, representing some twenty five countries. Be on the lookout for these people, and seize the opportunity to learn from them. They will certainly learn from you, and we can all say "Kong gang ul wi ha yo!" together. (Korean for "cheers") were given certain privileges. Elliott was amazed at the results: "Immediately, brown-eyed people became obnoxious, arrogant, overbearing, condescending, rude disgusting people. And my blue-eyed students became angry and sad and withdrawn."

Affected strongly by the results of her experiment, Elliott has dedicated the past 25 years of her life fighting racism. She attempts to recondition the deeply ingrained attitudes some whites have towards people of color.

Elliott believes that there is no such thing as reverse discrimination. "In order to be a racist you have to be willing to judge people and treat people negatively on the basis of the color of their skin and have the power to institutionalize your judgments and your treatments," she said. "Only white people have that power."

Claiming not to be a hypocrite, Elliott even views herself as a racist. "I still think and react like a racist," she said. "The conditioning never stops. It takes a great deal of effort to overcome the continuous conditioning." Elliott stated that she cares about racism because it hurts everyone, and as an educator, she believes in helping people overcome ignorance.

The "Blue eyes/Brown eyes" lecture is at 7p.m. on Wednesday, September 28, in Holloway Hall Auditorium. There will be a video, lecture, and questions and answers. So for all you people who never thought of yourself as a racist, Jane Elliott may open up your eyes.

Students Help to Clean-Up Assateague Park

by Elizabeth Grant, staff writer

Last Saturday, more than 200 people converged on Assateague Island, all in search of one thing: trash.

Retired couples, corporate workers, moms and dads with their kids, and college students spent the afternoon combing the beaches for marine debris as part of the International Coastal Cleanup.

The Center for Marine Conservation coordinates cleanups throughout the nation. It is headquartered in Washington, D.C. and has three other offices in the U.S., including a Chesapeake Bay Field Office in Hampton, VA.

The Assateague cleanup is an annual event which takes place in the fall, usually the weekend before a cleanup of Chincoteague Island. This year, both cleanups occurred on the same day, in coordination with local efforts on the Nanticoke River.

Upon arriving at the cleanup site, volunteers were shuttled by park rangers to various dropoff sites along the shore. Stocked with latex gloves, trash bags and clipboards, they embarked upon their trashquest.

The clipboards were for the Center for Marine Conservation's compilation of data. Every year, the Center analyzes data from more than 150,000 volunteers from around the country. Specific information listed on these cards help to identify pollution sources.

Volunteers were asked to keep account of all debris collected on data cards. Also included was a "Pocket Guide to Marine Debris" to inform the public about the cleanup process.

Trash collects on the beaches from both offshore and land-based sources. Ships and boats from which garbage is dumped are the major offshore polluters.

In 1987, the United States ratified an international treaty called MARPOL Annex V. All signing nations agreed to prohibit the dumping of plastics from their ships. This cleanup is estimated. Last year's total for Assateague Island was over 9.6 tons.

This waste takes all forms, including odd items such as toy shovels, side view mirrors and rubber skeletons. Among

Although the official trash pickup was over, the experience was not so quickly forgotten by some participants. Volunteer Lisa Burkley, a junior at SSU, said, "When you collect trash all afternoon, you get into the most frequently collected items are plastic bags, metal cans and cigarette butts.

After hours of bagging trash, recording it, and dropping it off at markers for later pickup, the beachcombers were driven back to the main parking lot for refreshments.

a mindset. You notice just how wasteful we are in our everyday lives."

"Although the cleanup was good for one day, trash accumulates every day, and people should come to see beyond the cleanup as an event."

Drinking and riding can lead to a loss of license, a conviction, or even worse. That's if you're lucky. The fact is, 50% of motorcycle fatalities involve riders who have been drinking. E-Mail Now Available to Students

by Lauren Weis, news editor

Welcome to the world of high technology at Salisbury State University. With the help of the computer services department, students now have access to a host of information services. Most notably, all student computer accounts have been given access to electronic mail, better known as e-mail. While in the past, SSU students could only receive e-mail messages, now we can send messages to any computer with access to Internet e-mail. Internet is the "big talk on college campuses," according to Linda Zeigler, academic coordinator of user services. According to the book The Internet Roadmap, Internet is "both a worldwide network of computer networks and a communication and information forum on practically any subject." Using e-mail, you could send a message to a friend at another university or contact your parents at home or in the office, using your SSU computer account. All students have a computer account which is set up by computer services when you register. This account is good for as long as you are registered at SSU. In order to access this account, go to any computer lab terminal and type in your username. This code consists of your initials and the last four numbers of your social security number. For example, Johnathan Thomas Doe, with social security number 123-456-7890, would have the username JTD7890. All students have an e-mail address which is necessary for receiving e-mail from off-campus. This consists of your username and a code: JTD7890@SAE.SSU.UMD.ED.U. The @ symbol is located above the 2 on a standard keyboard. In order to send e-mail off-campus, this code is necessary:

I was so happy the other day because my girl and I figured out that one of her biggest problems is fear of abandonment. So.... I told her I'd never leave her. Then she looked up at me with tears in her eyes and said her other big problem is that she is afraid of commitments. So, I told her that soon I would drop her, and she would be free! That didn't seem to help. So then, I told her I was going to prison for five years. That made her feel much better. Love is magic.

MX%JTD7890@SAE.SSU.U MD.EDU". Thanks to a recent memory upgrade and pressure exerted last semester by the students, computer services now offers this service to all students. Whereas, in years past, Internet privileges were limited to students who specially requested the service for academic purposes. Even now, campus-wide Internet services are limited to e-mail. "The computer services department does not currently have the resources to offer full Internet privileges to all students," explained Ziegler. In order to access full services, students must apply, have a valid academic reason (such as researching a paper) and be sponsored by a faculty member. Applications are available from the computer services department in Fulton Hall.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

IF YOU THOUGHT COLLEGE WAS EXPENSIVE, TRY PUTTING YOURSELF THROUGH RETIREMENT.

Think about supporting yourself for twenty-five, thirty years or longer in retirement. It might be the greatest financial test you'll ever face. Fortunately, you have one valuable asset in your favor: Time. Time to take advantage of tax-deferral. Time for your money to grow. But starting early is key. Consider this: if you begin saving just $100 a month at age thirty, you can accumulate $138,209* by the time you reach age sixty-five. Wait ten years and you'd need to set aside $203 a month to reach the same goal. At TIAA-CREF, we not only understand the value of starting early, we can help make it possible—with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years. Over 1.5 million people in education and research are already enrolled in America's largest retirement system. Find out how easy it is to join them. Call today and learn how simple it is to put yourself through retirement when you have time and TIAA-CREF on your side.

Women's Volleyball Team Places Third in Gull Classic

by Mike Beardslee, sports editor

Saturday, September 24—the Salisbury State women's volleyball team (7-8 for the year) suffered a disappointing

SSU battles Catholic in Saturday's Gull Classic

loss to conference rival Catholic to place third in the 1994 Gull Classic Volleyball Tournament. Richard Stockton College took first place honors while Catholic came in second.

Marymount placed fourth with an overall match score of 1-3 and Frostburg was put on ice for the day as they failed to win a single game.

The tournament was actually much closer than the final standings indicate. The top three teams all had the same match score (3-1), but Richard Stockton came out ahead under the tiebreaker rule to finish first.

"In my mind it was a three way tie for first place," said SSU head coach Deanna Parks. "We came together as a team today. We lost our first game [against Marymount] 15-0, but we put it behind us and managed to beat them. (4-15,

Catholic and SSU. The Gulls dropped the first game, 7-15, but it looked like they might win the second as they jumped out to a 13-7 lead. Unfortunately, Catholic battled back and won the second game, 13-15, to claim match victory.

"We served well until the last match," said Parks. "We need to work on our consistency and learn to play within our limitations. Sometimes we get tentative in tight situations instead of continuing to hit the ball hard and attacking."

SSU's Jen Bowman was outstanding as usual, and earned the title of tournament MVP, the second year in a row she has claimed the award. Despite the 3-1 record for the day, she was still visibly disgruntled. "We play together well at times, but not all the time," Bowman said after the match. "We don't always have good fundamentals, and fundamentals are the key to winning."

"No one wants to win more than she does," said Parks. "She's definitely a leader, and a very tough player."

Sophomore Courtney Moore also played well for SSU and was selected to the All-Tournament team.

"This team is way ahead of last year's team (at this time)," said Parks. "We're a much better passing team, a much better unit, and we have more opportunities to hit at the net. We definitely have more offensive threats."

The Gulls will attend the Washington College Volleyball Invitational on September 1-Oct. 1. Their October 26 meeting with Goucher is their only remaining home match, so make sure you come and show your support as they fight for their first ever CAC Championship.

Cross Country team up and running

by Jeffrey Brameyer, staff writer

The Salisbury State men's and women's cross country teams are gearing up for their season and are full of high goals and lofty expectations.

With their first two invitationals behind them, the Seagulls have seen their capabilities and believe that they have the potential to be one of the stronger teams around.

At the season opening invitational at Lebanon Valley, the teams demonstrated just how strong they can be. Out of 30 teams at the invitational, the women's team finished eighth while the men's team finished in 12th place.

Assistant coach and former SSU cross country runner Erin Darcy believes that at the Lebanon Valley Invitational the two teams gave stellar performances, especially since the team had only begun practicing together one week before. Darcy also added that the invitational was very good for the team because the level of competition was so high.

The teams also demonstrated dominance at the Howard University Express Invitational with the women's team winning the meet and the men finishing second.

On the women's side, freshman Lori Frei has emerged as a rising star for the team. At Lebanon Valley, Frei finished 19th out of more than 200 runners and she impressed everyone with her first place finish at the Express

Wehr leads SSU Men's Soccer

by associated press

Last Saturday the Salisbury State men's soccer team traveled to North Carolina to battle the Bishops of North Carolina Wesleyan. After a scoreless first half, the Gulls took control and exploded for 4 consecutive goals within a twenty minute time span. The final score was 4-1 as NCW added a goal late in the contest after the outcome had already been decided.

Keith Wehr led the way as he netted his first two goals of the season to put SSU ahead by a 2-0 score. The first goal was assisted by freshman Sean Collins and junior Willie Morris as Wehr eluded the goalie for the score. Twelve minutes later, Wehr raced down the center of the field, received the ball from sophomore Eric Viggiano and skipped the ball past the Bishop's keeper.

A mere fifteen seconds later Morris blasted a shot from twenty yards out to put the game away 3-0. Three minutes after that, Matt Gaines, assisted by Viggiano, netted his second goal of the season. Senior Jason Fearn and freshman David Loble's fine execution led to the scoring opportunity.

With fourteen minutes left in the contest, NCW scored a meaningless goal as Chad Garbrandt knocked in a loose ball in front of the net to make it 4-1.

Senior Joe Herman and freshmen Anthony DeMartini combined for four saves, while NCW keeper Darren DePalo ended with ten.

The Gulls outshot the Fighting Bishops, 17-7.

"Although N.C. Wesleyan was 2-3-1 coming into the contest, they have lost most of their games by only a one goal margin," said head coach Gerry DiBartolo. "This game today was a tribute to a total team effort, as we were able to put in four goals against a talented team."

SSU won the game without leading scorer Ousman Auber who was ejected during last Wednesday's 1-1 tie with regional opponent Randolph-Macon. "After the setback against Greensboro, and the draw with Macon, this was a big win for us and we're now back on track," said senior captain Jason Fearn.

The win raised Salisbury's record to 4-1-1 for the season. They will clash against rival Johns Hopkins at home on Wednesday at 4:00. On Saturday, SSU travels to Glassboro, New Jersey to take on nationally ranked Rowan College.

Gull Takes

Sea Gulls Downed by Frostburg

Last Saturday Frostburg State handed SSU their third consecutive loss of the season as they piled up 600 yards in total offense for a final score of 46-17. It was the sixth straight time SSU has been beaten by their state rivals. The win improved Frostburg to 3-0 on the season and they are currently ranked seventh in Division III football. The Gulls got into the end zone late in the third quarter when backup quarterback David Doy hit tight end Scott Burrell with an 11-yard touchdown pass that made the score 39-10. SSU's final score came on a one-yard run by backup running back McArthur James with 14:35 left in the game. Starting quarterback Marc Thomas completed 14 of 27 passes for 154 yards, while Doy was 12 of 19 for 132 yards. The Gulls finished with 358 yards in total offense.

Bell runs Gulls to Captain's Classic

Rebecca Bell sparked the Salisbury State University women's cross country team to the championship of the Captain's Classic hosted by Christopher Newport University. The SSU men's team finished third in the event. Bell ran the 3.1 mile course in 20:40 to finish fourth overall. Teammates Kelly Delp (sixth), Vicki Huchko (seventh), Jen Binford (eighth), and Elizabeth Pagel (eleventh) also led the Gulls to victory. The women finished ahead of Norfolk State, Christopher Newport, and Hampton University. For the men Ryan McComas ran the five mile men's course in 27:55 (seventh) while Jon Douglas (thirteenth), Andrew Younkin (16th), Matt Piotrowski (19th), and Dave Boster (23rd) led the Gulls past Hampton.

Fatz Leads SSU Field Hockey

Last Friday, Sue Fatz scored two goals as Salisbury State defeated Frostburg 4-1. Christina Melander and Laura Getty also scored for SSU to increase their record to 5-1 on the season. Frostburg had a 28-16 shots taken advantage. SSU goalie Karen McGammon made 10 saves while Frostburg goalie Shelly Mitchell made nine saves. On Saturday, Salisbury's five-game winning streak was snapped as they lost to Ithaca at Frostburg State University. Sue Bresnick scored two goals for Ithaca (5-1) while Fatz scored the only goal for the Sea Gulls off an assist from Jen Sites. McGammon had 11 saves for SSU (5-2). The Gulls lost despite a 22-13 shot advantage and 11-2 edge in penalty corners.

Women's Soccer Rolls On

Ava Tasker and Cindy Darulis scored goals as Salisbury edged winless Marymount 2-1 last Friday night. Stacy Best scored Marymount's (0-6) lone goal. SSU (4-1) had a 68-1 shots on goal advantage and a 13-0 edge on corner kicks. Sea Gulls goalkeeper Kristi Kauffman had no saves for the Gulls. Marymount goalie Sarah Djuno made 35 saves. On Sunday, SSU clashed with nationally ranked Mary Washington, but the results were too late to be included in this week's edition of the Flyer.

Men's Soccer Ties Randolph-Macon

SSU's men soccer team staved off a short handed (one man down) situation for the final 38:34 of the game and held on to tie visiting Randolph-Macon last Wednesday by a score of 1-1. Matt Tirschman scored on a penalty kick for SSU with 20:20 left in regulation. Mike Henning then answered with a penalty kick of his own to tie the game at 1-1, which is where it ended after double overtime. SSU had a 18-16 shots on goal edge and 7-5 corner kicks advantage. Joe Herman made 11 saves, while RMC's keeper Mark Cola collected 12 saves.

Cross Country

Invitational. Transfer student Jeff Hankins has emerged as the Gull's top male runner. He finished 26th at Lebanon Valley and sixth at the Express.

The two teams are training so that they peak at the end of the year, where they hope to have strong showings at the conference meet and the South regional qualifier. The ultimate goal for both teams is to make it to nationals and with the talent laden squad, they have a good chance of going that far.

If they do not reach their goals the team can certainly rule out lack of training as an excuse. With a rigorous training schedule that includes long distance intervals, sprint workouts and "recovery" days that include up to eight miles of running, the team is definitely preparing itself.

According to coach Darcy, senior runners Jeff Freimanis, Dorothy Dean and Donna Krebs have all provided the team with strong leadership for the younger members of the team.

Freimanis, who has run four years for the Gulls, believes that this is, "One of the best teams ever," and he is ready to guide the team to help it reach its full potential.

With the season stretching into November, the men's and women's cross country teams have a long road to travel and hopefully that road will end up at nationals for this very talented squad.

ΠΛΦ

Pi Lamda Phi

Hi everyone! We hope that everyone had a great summer, but no matter how great it was, it won't compare to the upcoming semester. Pi Lam is back, and we're ready to have some fun! RUSH has been going great, and we're looking forward to partying with you all some more. Any guys interested in checking us out can find our flyers all around campus, or simply look for a brother with letters by the "Benches."

Last Thursday night was an exciting one at Hooter's, led by DJ's Glenn and Bob.

Everyone had a fun time! We'd like to extend a special thanks to ZTA for the "Black and White" social. Let's do it again when you can extend your curfews.

On a more serious note, we'd like to thank everyone who was there for us after the death of Brother Tom Norman. Your support was greatly appreciated and will never be forgotten. Well, that's all for now. Anyone interested in getting together can call Paul at 749-2704. Until next week, see ya!

ΑΣΤ

Alpha Sigma Tau

Our RUSH is now over, but we sure had fun! We met a lot of wonderful girls, and we wish that we could have taken you all.

Congratulations to our eight new pledges who were ribbon pinned on Friday—we're very proud of you. We'd like to thank Sigma Alpha Epsilon for our "groovy" social last Friday night...those platform shoes and polyester just never go out of style, huh?!

The sisters of AST are also excited about introducing our new pledges to our adopted granddad "Shorty." He's doing wonderfully, and we can't wait to visit him again. Also, congratulations go to our Sister of the Week for 9/11, Nicole Boucher and our sisters of the week for 9/18, Lisa Gavin and Ann Gulden. We love you all...keep up the good work!

AST is also proud to announce that at our National Convention this summer, we received many awards, including:

1st place for our scrapbook, 2nd place for overall chapters, 2nd place in social service projects, and 3rd place for a song we submitted. We are very proud of these awards, but we are still striving to be even better!
